Young person in a wheelchair

You live nearby, and although you need a wheelchair, you enjoy taking part in competitive sports.

The park has disused courts and rough grassed areas that you feel could be developed for a range of sport facilities.

You also use the park as a route to local shops and amenities, but the paths are uneven, and there are some steps in places. This, you notice, makes it equally difficult for families with prams to use the park.

Before the meeting, think about:

- What sporting activities could the park offer you and able-bodied people?
- What consideration needs to be made when planning routes and new features in the park?
- What provision needs to be made for you in any planned new facilities or conversions?
